Join us for the Shenandoah Club's new Speaker Series! In this monthly luncheon series, we'll hear from women entrepreneurs and professionals in private industry, education, and non-profits.

Daisy Ball, Ph.D., is Associate Professor and Coordinator of the Criminal Justice Program at Roanoke College. At Roanoke, she serves as Director of the Inside-Out Prison Exchange Program.

The program exposes traditional college students to the realities of incarceration, while at the same time exposing inmates to academic content and pro-social interactions with college students. Dr. Ball's research focuses on race/ethnicity and criminal justice, specifically on the criminal justice contact of Asian Americans. Recent publications have appeared in peer-reviewed journals including Deviant Behavior and Sociological Spectrum.
